WORKSHOP TO DISCUSS CHANGES IN RELATIONSHIPS

MISSOULA--

"Breaking Up is Hard to Do, and More Than Meets the Eye" is the topic of a University-community workshop to be presented by the Council for Human Resources at the University of Montana, according to council coordinator Dan Smith.

The public is invited to attend the workshop free of charge. It will be held Oct. 24 at 8 p.m. at the Carousel in the Eagles' Manor, 2200 Stephens in Missoula.

The workshop will deal with the nature and outcomes of changed relationships, not only on a personal basis but on a local and national level as well.

Five guest speakers will be featured at the workshop, with each speaker discussing a different aspect of changing relationships.

Speakers and their topics are: Dr. Bill Wilmot of the Department of Interpersonal Communications, "Letting a friend down easily"; John O. Mudd, dean of the University law school, "Divorces that aren't so final"; Jim Charriere, manager of The Gentry, a local men's clothing store, "Shifts in the local business community"; Dr. Paul Larsen of the Department of History, "International Diplomacy"; Dr. John Madden, classicist from the Department of Foreign Languages, "Lessons offered by the ancient Greeks and Romans."

Each speech will be approximately 15 minutes and will be followed by a period reserved for questions and discussion from the audience, Smith notes.

The Council for Human Resources hopes to hold three such workshops during the academic year, according to Smith. A second workshop is tentatively scheduled for late February or March, Smith says.
